Between young people gave their lives to Christ and were baptized at the first-ever Literature Evangelist Kids Association (LEKA) Convention, held in Lusaka, Zambia. The 16 were part of a group of close to 300 literature evangelist kids and publishing leaders from six unions within the Southern Africa-Indian Ocean Division (SIOD) Territory, held last March 31-April 2. Approximately 40 young people decided to join the literature ministry, recognizing that the event had helped them better understand the ministry.

There was excitement among the kids who attended the convention. Delight Mwale, one of the delegates and a LE child, said it was exciting to be part of the first-ever LEKA convention, for it helped her to make new friends locally and internationally. She said the convention helped her learn how to deal with real issues young people go through daily. She appealed to other LE kids who did not attend to take advantage of these meetings, for they help attendees to grow spiritually. Faith Simwembwe, director, Southern Zambia Union Conference; Keith Chumpa, president, Lusaka Conference; Moses Kapunda, president, West Zambia Conference. They spoke on peer pressure, drug abuse, addictions, and mental health.

Philippine-wide Publishing Leaders Seminar Urges Attendees to Collaborate and Innovate in Spreading Gospel

The Philippine-wide Publishing Leaders Seminar was held at the Bohol Plaza Resort, Tagbilaran City, Bohol, March 27-29, 2023. It was attended by the publishing leaders, mission, union, and world leaders in attendance. With the theme "It's Our Time! Will Go as the Messenger's Leader," the seminar aimed to emphasize the importance of spreading the gospel message through printed pages, reflecting the realization that Jesus is coming soon.

Pr Cabanlong, publishing director for the Northern Luzon Union in the Southern Asia-Pacific Division, expressed gratitude for the meeting's convening. He appreciates the idea that "this seminar aims to foster collaborative among God's workers, provide a platform for sharing ideas and messages based on secretariats in the Bible and Spirit of Prophecy, and to serve as a strong co-commitment worker to continue publishing ministries until Jesus comes."

The seminar covered a variety of topics, including leadership principles, best practices for presenting health books, effective literature evangelist recruitment and mentoring, and strategies for spreading the gospel message through Adventist literature.

Attendees participated in lectures and panel discussions, and listened to inspiring testimonies from successful publishing leaders and area publishing leaders. Some of the delegates scored their appointments as a part of their gathering. "I am excited to attend this leadership seminar because it provides me with valuable information and insights on publishing ministry. Publishing is especially important because it is a crucial component of spreading the gospel. I'm so passionate about literature ministry and to remain faithful in serving the Lord," said Ezron Pelayo, area publishing leader from the central Philippines.

Noticity Stephen Apola, associate publishing leader of the Adventist Church, delivered impactful messages on letting God be the leader in fulfilling the gospel commission through the printed pages, as well as engaging youth and students in sharing the gospel message.

Apola urged the audience to listen to the bookings of Moses by cultivating a spirit of humility and obedience. He emphasized the significance of their ministry, stating that it is crucial to spread the gospel through literature and emotionally connect with the audience, who were waiting for the message.

Literature evangelists were reminded that God initiates and directs effective ministry, and that God seeks to carry out His plan. This encourages believers to be a part of God's plan, as God has chosen them to be a part of His plan. The speaker also highlighted the importance of being open to God and His strategies, because God had a different plan. "When God approached Moses at the age of 40, he had lost confidence and leadership qualities, but he was humble.

Apola emphasized that the publishing ministry is holy ground, as is every step a believer takes in God's presence, explaining that allowing God to initiate ministry rather than attempting to initiate it on your own is the key to success. Believers must pray for God to reveal the needs of the people they serve, as God is at the ministry's forefront meeting these needs.

"God is aware of the people's needs in your territory. God is aware of the people's suffering in your territory. God knows what they need, and He knows those needs. And it is God who dispatches you and the literature evangelists to meet those needs," Apola highlighted. He concluded by sharing his own decision to practice tithing over ministry, trusting God to take care of what he is entrusted to do.

Throughout the weekend event, attendees participated in a variety of activities, including lectures, panel discussions, and discussions on topics such as effective leadership, communication strategies, and the use of group technology in the publishing ministry. They also had the opportunity to network with other leaders of publishing ministries, share their experiences and learn from one another.

While most Christian denominations around the world observed Holy Week, the Tri-Union of the Adventist Church in the Philippines held its annual Publishing Ministries Leadership Seminar in Bohol, Philippines, from April 6 to 9, 2023, with the theme "It's Our Time: I Will Go as the Messenger's Leader."

The seminar was co-hosted by the Central Philippine Union Conference and the Southern Asia-Pacific Division. The program's goal was to give leaders in the Philippine Seventh-day Adventist Church's publishing ministries department the skills and knowledge they needed to do their jobs well. This seminar brought together attendees of the importance of ministry by example of the Jesus method.

On the first day of the conference, Bright Nicholas, associate publishing director, delivered impactful messages on letting God be the leader in fulfilling the gospel commission through the printed pages, as well as engaging youth and students in sharing the gospel message.

In addition to the entertainment and panel discussions, and listened to inspiring testimonies from successful publishing leaders and area publishing leaders. The North Brazil Union covers three Brazilian states, where the church publishers owned by members. There are about 350,000 Adventists and 3,600 congregations under the leadership of 377 pastors. The Adventist work began in northern Brazil at the beginning of the twentieth century. In 1927 two literature evangelists, Hans Mayr, from Germany, and André Gebhardt, from Brazil, left the Brazil Publishing House in Tatui, with a truck that was loaded with books. Only another truck would reveal the result of their dedicated work.

Today 550 LEs are working in the North Brazil Union territory. In 2022 they brought 256 people to the feet of Jesus through baptism. To celebrate this work, the North Brazil Union Publishing Ministries, on April 16, 17, and 18, in São Paulo Adventist Training Center, participated in a special LE convention. In addition to the celebrations and seminars presented by the General Conference publishing director, division publishing director and other union officers, the attendees had the opportunity to spend a day visiting Brazil Publishing House, where we received a special tour.

Ivan Nasiomeno, NBU publishing director and coordinator of the event, did an extraordinary job providing the LEs with an inspiring and encouraging convention.

To celebrate God's miracles in the publishing work and to encourage and inspire Literature Evangelists to carry out their ministry, the Central Brazil Union held its annual LE Convention on April 12 - 15, 2023.

The Central Brazil Union (CBU) coordinates the work of the Adventist Church in eight conferences located in São Paulo state, the most populated and economically developed region in Brazil. In the metropolitan area of São Paulo, there are 200,000 Adventists, 2,000 congregations, and 400 pastors. The union has 280,000 church members pastored by 700 ministers. In these large urban centers literature evangelists also play a crucial role in mission accomplishment.

Central Brazil Union has an army of 450 regular LEs working year-round, and an additional 1,200 students of SDA ministries publications during summer and winter vacation programs.

One of the most touching testimonies happened on the evening of April 12. The union and conference publishing directors baptized nine people reached by the LE ministry.

In the SDA Church history, the LEs received a dynamic series of sermons on Christian education, technology, and sales. The union and conference officers, publishing house representatives, division, and GC publishing directors were among the facilitators.

The convention ended on the Sabbath evening of April 15, with LE testimonies and a special tribute to colporteurs who died during the pandemic. Leaders and LEs also received plaques and medals of recognition for their work.

El Salvador Union Holds a Publishing Ministries Congress

The program started with a seminar for church pastors from all over the country. The facilitators were Abel Pacheco, El Salvador Union president, Maria Espinoza, and Ramon Gallardo, publishing director and the Inter-American Division and the General Conference, respectively.

The SDA Church membership in El Salvador is approximately 200,000, in more than 1,000 congregations. Congregations in Costa Rica, four bookstores, 30 active LEs, and 800-plus church publishing coordinators serve as the primary agents of SDA literature distribution.

Evita Lazo Union publishing director and regional Pathfinder director, presented the Pathfinder Publishing Ministries program, including the Month of the Book. An initiative to promote a wide circulation of books among church members and the public in general in which discounts and congress prizes were taken place to increase book sales. LEs will also benefit from an impressive list of prices in May.

On Sabbath, April 29, the congress continued with an inspiring program for the LEs including an award ceremony of recognition and encouragement.

The following day, more than 800 local church publishing coordinators joined the event for Sabbath School and Publishing Ministries at the end-time, presented by Almir Marroni, General Conference Publishing director.
